PREFACE

The purpose of a bibliography is to list all publications, early and late, great or small, and to arrange them in such a way that the whole literature of a people may be in evidence and be at the service of inquirers. Such a bibliography of Michigan authors has long been needed. This bibliography is intended to help fill this need. It is limited to authors of published books, except in the case of a few very early ones, but is not confined to any class or classes of books. The term Michigan author is capable of many interpretations and in this bibliography is applied to those of Michigan birth and to resident authors.

The bibliography is divided into three parts. Group I is composed of citizens and includes native-born authors who remained in the state and those who came into the state. Of writers who came into the state, only those were included who entered on or before 1920.

Group II is made up of native-born authors who left the state. In this group are found a number of prominent writers who, although they are no longer residents, are called Michigan authors and are certainly products of the state. The members of this group received their education in Michigan and many of them performed some work in the state.

Group III is a list of authors who spent some time in Michigan. In some instances literary work was done during their period of residence, but in other cases the literary work was done after their departure. Most of this group are persons of prominence whose stay is a matter of interest but whose literary work cannot be added to that of Michigan. Biographical material only is given in this group.

Michigan material for reference is used wherever it was found.

A classification of the authors of Groups I and II follows the bibliography.

A work of this character is of necessity very incomplete. Numbers of authors have not been included because of the inability to obtain sufficient data. The knowledge and records of work done in various regions is often meager and incomplete. No difficulty attends the discovery of noted writers but great difficulty attends the discovery of lesser known ones.

I wish to thank persons from whom I have received assistance. Much credit is due to the libraries and to the county clerks of the state, for valuable services were rendered by them. To express acknowledgment due to individuals would require the mention of many names, for many persons suggested names of authors, authors gave information concerning themselves, and friends and relatives gave information concerning authors of the past.
